RSS and News Feeds

Public Affairs

RSS (Really Simple Syndication) is an XML-based format for sharing and distributing Web content. Sign up to receive notifications for updates and newly posted items such as press releases or new content posted to tsa.gov by following these simple steps:

- Step 1 - Get an RSS reader
  You can use an online reader which works from any web browser, or you can download software that runs on your computer.
- Step 2 - Enter the location of the Transportation Security Administration RSS feed
  In your RSS reader, add one or more of the feeds listed below.
- Step 3 - Read the Transportation Security Administration feed
  In your RSS reader, select one or more of the feeds listed below.

Available News Feeds

- [3] Notify me when TSA.gov is updated [3]

Frequently Asked Questions

What is RSS?
RSS stands for "Really Simple Syndication." It is a standard format used to share content on the Internet. Many websites provide RSS "feeds" that describe their latest news and updates.

How can I use RSS?
You can use RSS to review updates from your favorite websites without having to visit each site. Using an RSS reader, you subscribe to the feed from a website, then scan headlines to find articles of interest. If you find an article you like, click the headline to read the complete article. You always have the latest headlines because your RSS reader periodically retrieves the RSS feeds. You can also use Transportation Security Administration news feeds directly on your website. (See "Can I use Transportation Security Administration News Feeds on my Web site?" below.)

Where can I get an RSS reader?
You can use an online RSS reader, which works from any web browser, or you can download software that runs on your computer. Some RSS readers are free, and some are available for a fee.

What are the terms of use?
Transportation Security Administration RSS feeds are provided free of charge for commercial/non-commercial use by individuals and organizations.

Can I use Transportation Security Administration News Feeds on my Web site?
Yes, Transportation Security Administration headlines and stories may be displayed on your Web site using RSS. Your own technical staff is your resource for implementation.

We encourage the use of Department News feeds as part of a website, however, we do require that the proper format and attribution is used when Transportation Security Administration content appears. The attribution text should read "Transportation Security Administration" or www.tsa.gov [4] as appropriate.

Latest revision: 27 January 2013

Links[1] http://www.tsa.gov/rss/rss_news_stories.xml
[2] http://www.tsa.gov/rss/rss_press.xml
[3] http://service.govdelivery.com/service/subscribe.html?code=USDHSTSA_15
[4] http://www.tsa.gov

 modified on 01/27/2013 - 06:30